The art of Tauno Kangro oscillates between reality and the world of dreams. His mythological sculptures comprise primeval s freeing sparkle. His nudes as if yearn for fairness and eternal youth. His animal sculptures are filled with permanent peace of h wisdom of nature. Tauno Kangro's pastels represent a blazing and dazzling world. Kangro's art is a phenomenon that does not our time. He uses materials such as rock and bronze in order to give his ideas an everlasting shape, to resist the evanescent human body. The gigantic sculptures of Kangro have become the symbols of many places in Estonia. His works could be foun squares and private collections in Germany, Denmark, France, Sweden and Finland. Tauno Kangro is like an archaic hero who pristine powers. He shapes the land with his sculptures, and even the sceptical critics marvel at his works. He erected 24 mon public art in Estonia as well as in other countries in Europe. At present he's erecting 24 meters high sculpture, public art which will become a significance in the history of the city of Tallinn".

"Creativity is the word Frank C. Hauser can be characterised with largely, for both as man and artist, he is the merging of two worlds. his parents are originated from Austria and the U.S.A., therefore not only in his appearance, also in his artistic work American flair is noticed with the profound charm of the Austrian-European Occident. However in his paintings this profoundness prevails mainly: with deep, amorphous colours and loaded, sometimes even macabre themes. The longer one is looking at these paintings, the more one can discover in them, with the risk of being carried away in the mysterious worlds of the artist. At the beginning of his career, he combined the academy of arts with a physic-scientific study. Graduated in Vienna and still eager to learn, he continued his education at Wainstate University in Chicago, in addition with a fix on (para)psychology. "My art," he poses, "must give an impression of what lies behind horizon, of what exists in ectoplastic areas where people normally spoken difficultly penetrate. After all, other appearances of being, unknown dimensions do exist. Life is not the bed of roses religious authorities are holding out false hopes of. Maybe I am on a kind of Holy Grail mission." This sounds very mysterious. He defines his school of painting as 'technological surrealism'; his scientific background as well as these mysterious aspects are expressed by this description. Frank Hauser is a multitalented artist, who beside (mainly) oil paintings, also periodically made sculptures, sculptures with which he breathed new life in ancient Egyptian culture and mystic. The unsuspected spectator being confronted with a sculpture as such, cannot possibly think otherwise than taking for granted he is looking at a hundreds of centuries old Egyptian statue. They are made in twentieth century, but one can't discover by looking at it. With the same sense for perfection penetrating everything he creates, he also finished works of applied design, industrial design, fashion, jewellery art movie design. In truely everthing he is taking up challenge to fulfil into perfection. in his most current creations and paintings, Hauser encompasses whatever he considers important in our space or time. Restlessness is a quality one can certainly give him credit for".
